Overview

Through the half-day workshop How to Structure a Science Report, Dr Marina Hurley shows how to tailor your report according to your project aim and your audience needs, including management, clients and stakeholders. You learn what to write in each section of your document, paying particular attention to the introduction and discussion sections and the executive summary. The workshop includes practical exercises that allow you to work on your own project(s).

Learn how to

- Structure your report.
- Align your project design with your document design.
- Decide what format, and in what section, to present your information and data.

What you take away

- Improved report writing skills
- A draft of your own work that you complete during the workshop

Resources provided

- The Writing Clear Science workshop handbook (lecture notes & exercises)
- A workshop participation certificate
- Worksheets and templates for future use
- Recommended reading list
